Christian Aid Ireland's hard-working rep at St John's Newtownbreda

Christian Aid Ireland has paid a special tribute to Jennifer Cairnduff, its energetic and hard-working representative at Newtownbreda \(St John's\) Presbyterian Church in south Belfast.

Jennifer and the congregation of St John's raised an incredible £7,650 to support this year's Christian Aid Week appeal.

Jennifer is pictured here standing between CAI Chief Executive Rosamond Bennett and her Minister Rev Paul Luton on the day when Rosamond visited the church to speak about CAI's work in Burundi - the focus of this year's Christian Aid Week appeal.

July 15, 2024

Jennifer shows remarkable dedication to the cause of ending poverty in some of the world's poorest countries. To mark Christian Aid Week, she had planned a number of fundraising activities – this church service and a soup lunchafterwards, as well as a bucket collection on the Ormeau Road, a house-to-house collection and a sale of pre-loved wedding and occasion wear.

But her plans were almost derailed when her husband Donald was given a long-awaited date to receive hip replacement surgery. In the days after his release from hospital, he would need help with every little task and Jennifer knew that she couldn't leave him 'home alone'.

Rather than cancel her fundraising plans, Jennifer roped in family and friends, creating a rota to ensure that Donald would have somebody to assist him when she was out fundraising.

CAI is delighted that Donald was well enough to attend the Christian Aid Week service and you can spot him in the second photograph – front right, using crutches.

Jennifer and Donald exhibit the sort of ‘everyday heroism’ that we see in so many of our supporters – ordinary people bravely trying to help others despite the difficulties in their own lives.

Please join us in wishing Donald well as he continues his recovery and thanking Jennifer for the ‘jenn-erous’ gift of her time.

Cathedral Calls

800-year-old Limerick choir is open for auditions

The harmonies belted out by the Saint Mary's Choral Foundation have been floating on the air in Limerick for the past 800 years, Andrew Clair writes in the Limerick Post

As the Magna Carta was being signed, Ghengis Khan was running amok, and Marco Polo was making his grand adventures, these Treaty singers were making melodious sound.

And now, choir director Peter Barley has put the call out for any and all interested in Limerick to take part in history in action and try out for the age-old group.

“There doesn't need to be an essential level of musicianship,” the choir director told the Limerick Post.

If someone can hold a tune and has a love of music, they're invited to join in on the song.

The choir is also open to younger members, with teenagers, third-level music students, as well as professionals included in Peter's open invitation.

“We work around busy schedules with our practice days. The choir is open to all faiths and none”, said Dean of Limerick, Niall J Sloane.

A Vicars Choral, historically a group of lay-men paid to lead the musical service, was recently reintroduced.

“Last year, we decided to reinvigorate the college and appointed four positions, with three currently filled,” Peter explained.

“Sitting next to an experienced singer is very helpful and one of the strongest reasons for reinvigorating the Vicars Choral.”

Added Dean Sloane of the man leading the show: “We’re fortunate to have someone of Peter’s caliber, with experience at King's College, Cambridge; St Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin; and Toronto, Canada. People often pay for music lessons elsewhere, but here you can be part of singing and, in many cases, get paid."

"Our message is to encourage people interested in exploring this to get in contact. It's not about signing up immediately; come along, try it out. If it's not for you, that's absolutely fine.

"If it is, there's a unique opportunity to be part of something with deep history, a team, and huge opportunities for expanding into other elements of life."

Open auditions will take place this September, with more information available on <https://www.saintmaryscathedral.ie/worship/join-the-saint-marys-cathedral-choir/>

Vicar of Glenavy Parish appointed

The Rev Stephen McElhinney, Mission Director of Sams Ireland (South American Mission Society) has been appointed vicar of Glenavy Parish.

Stephen, who has served as Mission Director of SAMS Ireland since 2018, brings experience and a deep passion for mission work to his new role.

Throughout his time with SAMS Ireland, Stephen has had the privilege of working closely with the Anglican Church in South America. He has formed partnerships with many church leaders across the continent, fostering a spirit of collaboration and mutual support. Reflecting on his mission work, Stephen said: "I have been privileged to work with the Anglican Church in South America and count it an honour to have met and partnered with many church leaders in this vast continent."

Stephen's journey in mission work began with his initial visit to Paraguay in 1990, igniting a lifelong passion for inspiring local churches in overseas missions. This appointment marks a return to the Connor Diocese for Stephen, who previously served as the rector of Derryvolgie Parish from 2011 to 2018.

July 15, 2024

Born in Manchester, Stephen moved to Lurgan, Co Armagh, in 1973. He graduated in Optometry from Aston University and after two years working in the north of England he returned to Ireland.

Stephen was ordained in Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, in June 2005 and served as a member of the staff team of Kill O' the Grange Parish Church, Dublin, before moving in May 2008 to Drumglass Parish, Dungannon. He was introduced as Priest-in-Charge of Derryvolgie Parish in 2011 and was later instituted as rector of the parish.

Stephen expressed his enthusiasm about his new role in Glenavy Parish. "I am very much looking forward to getting to know the parishioners and people of Glenavy, Crumlin, and the Tunney. Together, we will prayerfully discover God's plans for the next chapter of the church's witness in this area," he said.

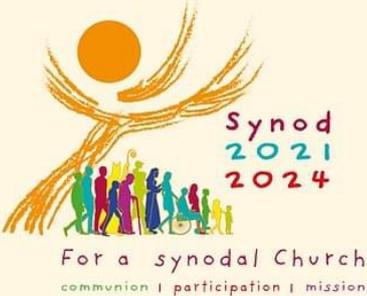

Joining him in this new chapter are his wife, Cathy, and their three children, who are all in various post-secondary school settings.

Stephen's local church experience together with his overseas mission experience will bring a unique and valuable perspective to Glenavy Parish. "The worldwide Body of Christ encourages and inspires one another," Stephen said, highlighting the importance of global and local church connections.

A date for the institution in Glenavy will be announced in due course.

from 10 am - 4 pm on Saturday, 7 September 2024

Her ministry, research and writing have been shaped by her biblical studies alongside her experience of living and working with those on the margins both in Ireland and Peru.
