DIARY - April 23 - 30

Dublin Exhibition remembers Irish First World War dead

Naming the dead has a powerful resonance for those left behind; we put names on gravestones and monuments, in death notices and on memorial cards. Now Dubliners can visit a moving work remembering and listing the names of all of the Irish war dead who fell on Belgium soil in the First World War.

A large memorial book, Assembly, records 174,000 soldiers' names and forms the central part of a new exhibit from the In Flanders Fields Museum in Belgium, now on display in Ireland for the first time. Along with an oversize book of the names of the war dead, the installation consists of five chairs (representing each year of the war).

The exhibit will be in on view in Dublin at different locations - City Hall, Dame Street and Richmond Barracks, Inchicore.

Assembly Memorial Chairs has been curated by artist Val Carmen for the In Flanders Fields Museum. Val has a particular interest in loss and memorials to the war dead and has been shepherding this work around various locations since 2014, the centenary of the start of the First World War.

Assembly Memorial Chairs is on display as follows:

City Hall, Dame Street from 1st to 29th April
Richmond Barracks, Inchicore from 13th to 26th
May

Mass of Hope for Belfast's homeless community

Saint Patrick's Church, Donegall Street is set to host a Mass of Hope for Belfast's homeless community. At the Mass, a new soup-kitchen will be opened. It will provide a safety-net and vital lifeline to those experiencing poverty and homelessness.

The initiative is in response to Pope Francis' call to reach out to those in need with concrete acts of mercy. Already, the parish has received pledges of support from community workers and volunteers. Local people are keen to make a difference and show their solidarity with those who have fallen on hard times.

Mass, which will take place on Wednesday 26 April at 7.00pm, will be a joyful celebration with music and song by Belfast City Gospel Choir. It will provide the city's homeless with an opportunity to gather and give their testimony in an atmosphere of faith and friendship. Everyone is welcome.
